

Refugee Policy

First, we'd like to ask a few questions about the federal government's Syrian refugee policy.

1. The federal government has promised to resettle 25,000 Syrian refugees by March 1st of this year. Since November, when the government took power, about 15,000 refugees have arrived. Overall, would you say you support or oppose the government's Syrian refugee resettlement plan?

Strongly support

Moderately support

Moderately oppose

Strongly oppose

Don't Know

2. Some people say the government shouldn't stop at resettling 25,000 refugees, and should take in more than that. What do you think is the ideal number of Syrian refugees Canada should accept in addition to the ones who have already come/are coming?

No more – stop now at 15,000

Stop at 25,000 – that's enough

An additional 1-5,000

An additional 5,000-10,000

An additional 10,000-15,000

An additional 15,000-20,000

An additional 20,000-25,000

More than 25,000 more

No limit

3. Initially, the government's plan was to resettle 25,000 Syrian refugees by January 1st of this year. The deadline was later pushed to March 1st. All things considered, would you say the timeline for resettling 25,000 Syrian refugees by March 1st is:

Too rushed

The right amount of time

Too slow

4. Based on whatever you've seen, read, or heard about the security checks in place to ensure no Syrian refugees pose a threat to Canadians, would you say:

[ROTATE TOP TWO]

The screening process is adequate

The screening process is inadequate

Not sure

5. Thinking about the future – say 15 years from now – do you think Canadians at that time will look back at the resettlement of Syrian refugees and say it was a success or failure?

Success

Neither success nor failure

Failure

Not sure/Can't say
