

$5 Dollar bill

QB1.

Base=All

Single choice

Earlier this year, the Bank of Canada announced it would redesign the Canadian $5 bill. Wilfried Laurier, the 7th Prime Minister of Canada, is pictured on the $5 bill.

Which is closest to your opinion:

It's a good idea to change the bill and put someone new on

It's a bad idea to change the bill

QB2.

Base=All

Multi choice

The Bank of Canada asked for public input regarding who should replace Laurier and has revealed a shortlist of eight people who could be featured on the new bill.

Regardless of how you feel about the change itself, which one or two would you most like to see on the $5 banknote? Please select from the list below.

(Select up to two)

[RANDOMIZE] [Photos/images from Bank of Canada site shown]

Pitseolak Ashoona – A self-taught Inuit graphic artist known worldwide for depictions of traditional Inuit life.

Robertine Barry – the first female French-Canadian journalist, and an advocate for social justice causes, especially women's equality.

Binaaswi (Francis Pegahmagabow) – a First World War veteran, the most highly decorated Indigenous soldier in Canadian history.

Won Alexander Cumyow – the first known Chinese Canadian born in Canada. He used his language skills to bridge the divide between Vancouver's English-speaking and Chinese communities.

Terry Fox – After losing his leg to cancer, he began a run across Canada to raise awareness for cancer research. More than $800m has been raised in his name to date.

Lotta Hitschmanova – Founder of one of Canada's first international development agencies. Devoted her life to helping people in need around the world.

Isapo-muxika (Crowfoot) – A leader of the Blackfoot Confederacy, known for his advocacy for peace between Indigenous nations and settlers.

Onondayoh (Frederick Ogilvie Loft) - Mohawk chief, First World War veteran. He founded the first pan-Canadian Indigenous organization in 1918 to advocate for Indigenous rights.

[Additional questions withheld for future release]